Kia ora tātou,

Welcome back to term 2.

Last Wednesday, I had the pleasure of attending the Prime Minister's Top Scholar Awards. This ceremony recognises students who come top in their subject across New Zealand, or who get three or more outstanding scholarships.

In 2017, Cameron Kelso came top in the Media Studies scholarship exam and so received an award from the Minister of Education – Mr Chris Hipkins. This is a well-deserved honour for Cameron, and his family who also attended the ceremony. Below is a photo of Cameron and his family with our local MP, Simon O'Connor, who also attended to celebrate Cameron's success.

Over the holidays, four of our students spoke on behalf of the college at two ANZAC ceremonies. Deanna Louis and Azita Nafissi spoke at St Heliers Bay, and Samuel Cogger and Harry Copeland spoke at St Andrews Village.

We received a lot of positive feedback from members of the public about how well the students spoke, including requests for copies of their speeches. The speech from Deanna and Azita is included in the later part of the newsletter. It is great to see our students serve their community and do so to a high standard. Congratulations to all four students.

This week we recognised the years 12 and 13 students who gained an excellence endorsement for their NCEA in 2017. As the numbers were so high, we had to extend the senior assembly. Congratulations to the students who were recognised, and to all students who achieved their goals for 2017.

Winter sports started last week. Thank you to the many volunteers who support our students to coach or manage these teams. Your contribution makes a huge and positive difference to our school and students. I know our 1st XI Girl's football team won their first game against Diocesan, and that the Premier netball team are going well in their grading games.

Good luck to all of our students playing this season. I look forward to seeing the students and their families courtside and field-side through the term.

Ngā mihi nui,

R Dykes

Market Day

Last Friday, 4 May 2018, we had our very first Market Day for 2018 run by Year 10 Enterprise Studies students. Students were required to carry out an inquiry on the impact the entrepreneurs' decisions have on people and/or the environment. They brainstormed business ideas, carried out research, made business decisions, created business plans and implemented their plan as the Market Day venture. The thirteen student-run businesses successfully set up their stalls and served their expectant customers, allowing the young entrepreneurs to gain an experiential learning. The products served ranged from authentic products like PokeBawls, Sushi, Chicken Katsu to treats such as Waffles, Smores, Cookie Dough, Popcorn and more.

THANKS TO OUR SPONSORS

INNOCENT PACKAGING™

INNOCENT PACKAGING
Yes, they make packaging out of plants, and yes, we love them. You can even find clear packaging made from plants. What?!!?

COUNTDOWN

You all know Countdown, but did you know about their values? They have soft plastic recycling in 130 stores, and they are slowly phasing out single use plastic bags.

TEGEL

Chickens!!! Tegel has very strict standards for their chickens, meaning you can be assured that their chickens are free range, and not locked in a cage.

The student-run business PokeBawls would like to extend their gratitude and appreciation to their sponsors:

- Countdown Onehunga for a generous donation of $100
- Tegel Chicken for providing delicious free-range chicken
- Innocent packaging for providing sustainable eco-friendly packaging

PokeBawls are proud to announce they were able to successfully run a sustainable business venture and will be donating $56.20 (30% of the profits) to New Zealand Sustainable Coastlines. Kevin Cao, CEO of PokeBawls, acknowledges that without the help of their sponsors, it would have been very challenging to reach their business goals of running a sustainable business venture and support the New Zealand Sustainable Coastlines.

We are looking forward to our next Year 10 Market Day at the end of this term, it will be bigger with 21 student companies setting up their stalls to implement their business plans. Watch this space for more.

Sports Update

Climbing

5th and 6th of May 2018 marked the start of the National Championship season for youth and adult climbers.

The Lead Climbing competition format engages all athletes in 2 rounds of qualifiers. The climbs are shown to athletes before the competition commences by video and the video remains visible during that part of the competition. Athletes can see one another compete and they will often be found passing on their experiences to other athletes as the competition progresses. There are 8 athletes, per age and gender category, with those attaining the highest combined score proceeding to finals.

Athletes competing in finals enter isolation 30 minutes before the start of the finals commencing. The groups are then lead out to view their respective climb for a few minutes before heading back to ISO. The climbing order is in reverse qualification (lowest to highest). The climber who reaches the highest point in an allocated 6-minute timeframe wins the event. Two Glendowie College students competed over the weekend and performed admirably:

- Niamh Montgomery (year 12) came 6th in Youth A
- Lukas Blenkinsopp (year 13) finished 2nd in the Junior section

Congratulations to both Niamh and Lukas.

Swimming

Year 11 student, Sean Gibbs, recently competed in the National Age Group Swimming Champs (NAGS) held from 17-21 April 2018 at AUT Millenium on the North Shore. This is the event on the swimming calendar for age grade swimmers and Sean's training regime had built over the first term with this as a focus.

Sean qualified for several events including the 50 freestyle, 100 freestyle, 200 freestyle, 50 butterfly and 100 butterfly. Sean was also asked to represent the Harlequins A (Auckland team) in the 4 x 200 freestyle relay team, which was also held during the event.

Sean had a great week at the Nationals reaching finals in all his events. Heats were held in the mornings with finals raced that evening for podium places.

Sean gained 5th place finishes in 50 Freestyle, 50 Butterfly and 100 Butterfly and just missed the podium with a 4th in the 200 Freestyle. With a time of 54.81s, Sean gained a Bronze Medal in the 100m Freestyle. With this result, Sean has qualified to compete at the NZ Open Nationals later this year. This is a fantastic opportunity for Sean as the Opens also double as a selection meet for the Junior Pan Pacific Swimming Championships and the Junior Olympics being held later this year.

Information

Please encourage students to check the Sports Noticeboard for information over the next 2-3 weeks. As the winter seasons get underway, there are often a number of venue and time changes to draws and training schedules.

Tangaroa House Charity Beach Clean Up

Tangaroa House would like to invite you and your friends/family along to their Charity Beach Clean Up hosted by Sustainable Coastlines on Sunday, 27 May 2018 at Tahuna Torea, Riddell Road (near Roberta Reserve) at 11:30am. (Please note the date has changed due to the poor weather forecast for the 13 May 2018).

The ocean is downstream from everywhere. When we drop litter or leave rubbish lying around, wind and water carry it out to sea. When it rains, litter on our streets gets washed into drains and flows through underground storm water pipes to streams, lagoons, estuaries and the sea, littering our coastlines and filling up our oceans with plastic. Sustainable Coastlines promotes that we use fewer products that create rubbish and dispose of what we use carefully, so that we can keep our coasts the way they should be: litter free. The choices we make have a huge effect on the health of our oceans. Not littering, putting rubbish in the bin and following the four 'R's are easy ways to sustain our beaches. The four 'R's are: REFUSE, REDUCE, REUSE AND RECYCLE. For the rubbish that is already on our beaches, the answer is simple: we can pick it up! Come and get involved in the hands-on solution!

If you are interested in attending the Beach Clean Up, please complete the expression of interest survey: <https://goo.gl/forms/FenjZY1tA7DYUjr2>

The itinerary for the Beach Clean Up is as follows:

- 11:00am: Key staff/students to arrive to set up
- 11:30am: Registrations open
- 12:00noon: Health and Safety Briefing and a few words from organisers
- 1:45pm: Return to home base for photos, gathering rubbish and clean-up
- 2:00pm: Lunch and wrap up

What to bring:

- Closed-toe sturdy shoes, such as sneakers, sports shoes or tramping boots are required for participation. Gumboots are not allowed. Coastal terrain can be challenging with rocks that can be sharp, loose and slippery.
- Warm and waterproof clothes: NZ weather is unpredictable. Bring at least one warm top layer and a rain jacket.
- Sun hat and sun cream
- Reusable water bottle (filled-up and ready to go)
- Snacks
- Camera (optional)

ANZAC Day Services

Azita Nafissi and Deanna Louis (year 13 students) gave the address at the St Heliers Bay ANZAC Service. The focus was about legacy and relevancy to all New Zealanders. Please see Azita's and Deanna's speech below. In addition, Samuel Cogger and Harry Copeland (year 13 students) spoke at St Andrews Village.

A special thank you to Colin Davis from the Orakei Local Board who provided our students with this wonderful opportunity to connect with the local community.

Ms B Rothbart, Year 13 Teacher in Charge

100 years ago, after 4 years of fighting, World War 1 finally ended. On 11 November 1918, we celebrated Armistice Day. It is easy to remember the year as a year of loss. Young men and women, only at the beginning of their lives went seeking adventure, and few returned. Eighteen thousand New Zealand soldiers had lost their lives and tens of thousands lost limbs. By December, a further 9000 people had died from a fatal spread of influenza here in Auckland. The idea of war holds a great paradox. How such destruction and violence can catalyse the advancement of science and medicine, and act as a stage for extreme heroic and altruistic qualities. Today we remember the loss but also the gain; the freedom that we were granted through the sacrifice of these soldiers and their families and the unity we displayed as a small yet powerful nation. For in unity there will always be victory. Many of these men were not New Zealanders by birth but had undeniable ANZAC spirit. Today is a day for all New Zealanders. And as the ANZAC soldiers came from all parts of the world to fight and fall across the globe, we remember that to be a New Zealander is not to be born here, but to share in the responsibility of upholding our history.

On the other side of the world lies a town whose liberation relied upon the brave and victorious feat of the ANZACs. A week before Armistice Day, hundreds of New Zealand soldiers dauntlessly embarked on their last major act of the first world war, one that would save the people and town of Les Quesnoy in France. The town had been held by German forces for nearly the entire war. ANZAC forces were tasked with liberating Les Quesnoy, and were faced with the immense challenge of surmounting the towering wall that surrounded it. Rather than choosing to destroy the wall, they used ropes and ladders so that the town and its civilians could be preserved, despite there being only one point along this wall where their 30ft ladder could reach to the top. It was at that point 2nd lieutenant Leslie Averill, in an act of true courage, began to mount the ladder, rung by rung drawing closer to the top. Within seconds he was peering over the edge with no knowledge of what awaited him on the other side. This moment of intense vulnerability, marked one of the greatest points in the history of New Zealand. Although we lost 135 soldiers during the liberation, not a single civilian was harmed.

The legacy of this day lives on in Les Quesnoy. Our flag is hoisted throughout their streets which bear names such as Rue Neo-Zelandais, Rue de Dr Averill, and even Rue All Blacks. In each corner of the world that our soldiers have travelled, they have left small traces of their gallantry. A part of New Zealand lives in Les Quesnoy. The spirit of the ANZACs and all the soldiers who lost their lives defending our country is very much alive in New Zealand, in the form of our freedom, and the courage and strength we have as a nation. The ground beneath our feet has been leveled by those that stood before us and those that fought for us. They walked over all the landmines, they crawled through the muddy trenches, they endured nights, days, years in danger. And today, today we are safe. The physical and economical security that New Zealand was able to develop from 1918 onwards is a fortune that can never be taken for granted. Moments such as today are essential in acknowledging how grateful we are to the members of the military who fought a hundred years ago and fight for us still. For today, ANZAC Day, is a place where we can mount the ladder of Les Quesnoy and peer into the lives and toil of those who fought, to understand their story, and continue their legacy.

“What is a legacy? It’s planting seeds in a garden you never get to see.” So many lives were lost in the first world war, men and women died for peace they would never experience. When we go about our day to day lives, we have them to thank for our safety and security. And their legacy stretches out across the globe.

Over 30,000 war graves for New Zealand soldiers have been identified across 79 countries. Our soldiers, often buried near to where they fell, leave their legacy across the globe. From the trenches of Gallipoli to the fields of France, their courage, their determination, their pride and their love formed a spirit that has and continues to define us as a nation. Our people rest in the land that they once considered enemy territory, they lie beside men that they once considered enemies. In the words of Mustafa Ataturk, former president of Turkey: “Those heroes that shed their blood and lost their lives, you are now lying in the soil of a friendly country”. My great-great grandfather Albert Orchard was a medic serving on the Western Front during the first world war. He was working in a field one day when he stopped to admire some bluebells, flowers which symbolise gratitude and humility. When he stepped away from the patch of flowers, a bomb hit, destroying the ground he had stood on only moments ago. I lived most of my life having no idea that this event was part of my personal history, but in remembering this moment, even though it was long before my birth, I can continue Albert’s legacy, and his story has truly become part of my own. A reminder to take the time to be grateful for beauty amidst the conflict and chaos of the world.

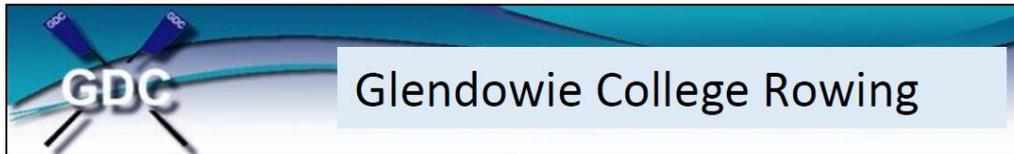

We live in a material world of constant change and impermanence. Great infrastructures crumble, mighty civilisations come to an end, people live and die. We know we cannot live forever, but as proud citizens of this country we are gifted with the ability to create something that will; a legacy. The life of a legacy, lies in our hands, we can choose to keep the legacy of the ANZACs and all New Zealand soldiers alive. It is so easy for these moments to be lost in the stress and swift speed of our lives, but it is so important that we slow down on this day and cherish that their moments of strife gained us freedom. Without them today, we would never have had our tomorrow. And for that I am grateful to be alive. “Stay close to anything that makes you glad you’re alive.”- these words from the Persian prophet Hafiz have always held much meaning for me. When I was given the opportunity to speak here today, my initial thoughts were worried ones. I worried because I do not have any blood ties to Kiwi soldiers, while my grandfather was a soldier, he was not a New Zealand soldier. But then I thought again; “Stay close to anything that makes you glad you’re alive”, these words held the answer to my worries. Because today, I couldn’t be more proud to be a New Zealander. The pride, courage and success of our nation is what makes me glad I am alive. And yet, this could never have been so without the remarkable men and women who have fought to protect and strengthen the New Zealand Spirit. The sacrifices and endeavours of the soldiers who fought in Gallipoli, France, South Africa, Vietnam, Afghanistan - they make me glad to be alive. And more importantly, to be alive here in New Zealand.

Today we are reminded of the need to preserve history. Later this year, a memorial museum is being established in Les Quesnoy to mark the centenary of the liberation of the town by New Zealand soldiers. This site in Europe is where the never to be forgotten stories of courage and sacrifice can be told. For the stories of our soldiers are too important to be restricted to our shores. The commemoration of ANZAC Day both in our country and others remains imperative to the survival of these soldiers’ memories. The lives that ANZAC’s have touched are a continuation of ANZAC lives we have lost. And in our commemoration, we are a continuation of their legacy. Each year, we place a new ladder against the walls of history, and endeavour to capture a moment in time, saving it for future generations we may never meet, for as William Faulkner said, “History is not was, it is.” To be post-war does not mean we are past war. Today we thank our soldiers and their families for the freedom we have been granted in their sacrifice. Today we have collective freedom, and personal freedom; freedom of choice. Today we choose to remember. Lest we forget.
